

August 12, 2009

Hometown: Fresh produce at Heineberg Senior Center

By Lynn Monty, Free Press Staff Writer

The Heineberg Senior Center Community Garden in Burlington has been blooming for three seasons thanks to a grant from The Friends of Burlington Gardens and The Vermont Community Garden Network.

“We were able to put in raised bed gardens here that we use for vegetables and flowers,” Center Director Gail Moreau said. “Our seniors donate time for planting and caring for the community garden and we use what we harvest to supplement our lunch program. We all enjoy the fresh produce.”

Friends of Burlington Gardens is a nonprofit that was created in 2001 to promote community gardens in Burlington and The Vermont Community Garden Network was established by Friends of Burlington Gardens in 2005 to support community and school garden projects across the state.

Contact Lynn Monty at 651-4826 or e-mail lmonty@burlingtonfreepress.com.

Additional Facts

More Information:

Visit www.burlingtongardens.org or call 861-GROW.
